WORKER SLASHED IN KNIFING AFFRAY HERE SUNDAY

Joe Gonzales, alias Joe Wilson, will face Judge J. A. Silva this week on charges brought by Luke Marina, after a knifing affray Sunday in which Marina was badly cut.

The fiasco is said to have taken place on the Shinn ranch, where Marina makes his home, after Marina made Gonzales "walk home." The knifing culminated a series of events, started when Gonzales asked Marina to take him to Warm Springs, to collect some wages due him there. The couple drove to Warm Springs, collected the cash, and are said to have stopped at taverns by the wayside all the way to Centerville, where they visited workers on the Lowrie ranch. Marina wanted to go home, and finally left Gonzales after the latter refused to come. Gonzales walked across rough fields, and decided to avenge his tired feet.

He attacked Marina with a short knife, according to reports, inflicted a shallow wound in the side.

The wounded man was given treatment by a Niles physician, then taken to an Oakland hospital when profuse bleeding would not stop. He has recovered, and swore to a complaint charging assault with intent to inflict great bodily harm.

FRANK PANIAGUA IS KILLED IN TRAIN-AUTO ACCIDENT

Failing to see an approaching passenger train at the Grant Line road crossing near Tracy Sunday night, Frank Paniagua, 31, of Decoto, was killed when his car was hurled from the tracks by the oncoming locomotive. He died en route to a Tracy hospital.

Paniagua was extracted from the wreckage of his car by a brother, Peter Paniagua, who was following in another machine. They had been to Turlock for a load of melons and were on their way home.

The deceased, who lived on Fourth street, Decoto, was well-known in this district. He was a member of the Alvarado Aerie of Eagles. His wife, Mrs. Mary Paniagua, and a daughter, Margaret, survive him. His parents, two sisters and four brothers are also living.

Funeral services were held from the Paniagua home yesterday morning, with services at 9:30 o'clock at the Corpus Christi church, Niles. Interment was in the Holy Sepulchre cemetery, at Hayward, under direction of the Chapel of Palms.

DRUNK DRIVER IS ARRAIGNED HERE YESTERDAY

Jose Hererra, accused of driving an automobile while in an intoxicated condition, appeared before Judge J. A. Silva, at Niles, yesterday, to answer charges. The time for the arraignment had been set for September 20 at the initial hearing last week, but was moved up to yesterday at request of defendant, who was represented by Public Defender H. K. Forsman.

Hererra was arrested on the Irvington-Warm Springs road after his machine ploughed into a ditch in an accident that involved several cars. It is said that Hererra's erratic driving had forced several oncoming drivers from the pavement. Hererra was slightly hurt in the accident, and was given first aid treatment before being lodged in the Hayward jail.

THIRTY MOTHERS AT INITIAL P.-T.A. MEETING

Thirty mothers, many of them parents of children just entering the Niles Grammar school, attended the opening meeting of the Niles Parent-Teachers' Association Tuesday. A short program, put on by primary grade children under the direction of Mrs. Margarite Crane, program chairman, featured the afternoon, which was designed as a welcome for the new mothers and for Miss Margaret Breier, new teacher.

At the business session, Mrs R. H. Bennett, ways and means chairman, suggested a card party, which was approved but no date set. The meeting time, formerly 2 p. m, will be moved up to 1:30 p. m., on the first Tuesday of each month. The time change is to make it possible for mothers to accompany their children home from school.

The mothers of the seventh grade children, with Mrs. Roland Bendel as chairman, served the refreshments. Next month the eighth grade parents, directed by Mrs. George Bonde, will have charge of the refreshments.

SCOUT HEADS LAY FINANCIAL PLANS FOR 1935 DRIVE

Quotas Being Worked Out For the Several Local Communities

Members of the district Boy Scout committee, headed by Judge Allen G. Norris, met last week at Centerville, for the purpose of framing tentative plans for scout activities for the fall and winter months, and to make preliminary arrangements to provide funds for activities in the balance of 1935 and in 1936.

It was pointed out at the meet that the only funds secured for this year were derived from a series of benefits given by township organizations, and that no public subscription had been worked out. The funds so secured were sufficient to pay the scouts' way for seven months of 1935. The balance will be included in the 1936 quota.

The decision was reached to have a unified campaign for the funds this time, from October 28 to November 11, with the district committee in charge. The budget is being worked out at present, and figures will be available for each town within the next week.

For 1935, only Decoto nad Newark paid in full. Niles, Irvington and Centerville still have to pay $50, $43 and $55 respectively, which sums will be added to the quota.

In a plea to the public, Norris asks support for the October scout rally. He and James Nunes attended the division meet at Hayward on September 12, where they heard a report by Homer Bemiss on the scout trip to the east.

NILES CHAMBER RESUMES ACTIVITIES AFTER REST

Presentation of League Trophy Planned for Monday Night

Fall activities for the Niles Chamber of Commerce got under way Monday, when the civic organization gathered for the first meeting after the summer "vacation." The closing meeting had been held late in June.

With Chamber President E. C. Grau presiding, fourteen members gathered at the traditional table in the Florence restaurant to exchange greetings and to plunge directly into business matters, some of them pending during the summer interlude.

Following the reading of a letter from the Alvarado Chamber of Commerce, suggesting a township-wide organization composed of all civic groups, to meet quarterly, the Niles group voted to approve, although some doubt was expressed as to the "durability" of the plan.

The matter of bus rates, particularly from the Masonic Home to Niles, was discussed, when it was called to the organization's attention by letter that the existing fare of fifteen cents, kept many home shoppers from coming to town. No action will be taken, it was decided, pending the outcome of a railroad com-

THE WISDOM OF THE OWLS

By Nell Farrington Myers, Niles Canyon

Two little owls in the oak tree sat,
A Republican and a Democrat;
Puzzled and worried, they wanted to know
Of the latest news on the radio.

One little owl concluded he knew—
"That one old man was almost through;
Why can't the Democrats agree—
Why must they quarrel? I cannot see!

"California is on the slump—
Headed for the political dump;
How can we serve our President,
When a Senator is on pleasure bent?

"Our plight is sad, I must relate—
We send a message then have to wait
For the leader of our Golden State
To woo and win another mate.

"We plan and hope, and wait some more,
While he waltzes 'round a ball-room floor;
Important matters are left to die—
Unless they are seen by another guy.

"How can we solve this awful riddle—
Working each end against the middle?
How can we work with the Roosevelt clan—
Will Republicans find the Forgotten Man.."

The pair talked on, all through the night,
They grumbled and swore that it wasn't right;
A house divided against each other
Is worse than a ship without a rudder.

One of them asked, "What can we do—
About old Cock-a-Doodle-do . . . . .
Does he intend to go full-swing,
Or pause, in his silly, youthful fling?

"We need a fighter known for truth—
Not giddy or gay, in his second youth
Strutting about like a Don Juan rooster,
Who thinks he can do whatever he uster.

"I fear that before his fling is through,
Poor Grandpa Cock-a-Doodle-do—
Will take a ride in the fatal hearse;
I'm sure if he grows to be any worse—
He'll be needing a guardian . . . . as well as a Nurse."

JUNIORS PLAN PARKING LINES FOR 1ST STREET

November Turkey Whist Slated By Civic Organization

JUNIORS PLAN

With President Sam Kerns back in the guiding seat after a lull, the Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce took up plans for fall activities Monday night, when the regular meeting was held at the Peerless grill. There were twenty members present.

Foremost in the discussions was that of parking lines for First street, which have been sanctioned by John H. Skeggs, district highway engineer. The lines, however, must be of the parallel variety, Skeggs' letter pointed out. The highway official stated that traffic congestion in the Niles business section renders the parallel lines mandatory.

INVESTIGATOR NAMED BY COMMISSION IN FARE DISPUTE

Plans for the Decoto Chamber Peerless Stage Company hearing before the railroad commission have been changed again.

Allen G. Norris, attorney for the Decoto group, stated yesterday the public hearing has been deferred, and a railroad commission investigator appointed to find facts for the investigating body, rather than throw responsibility on the Decoto group to produce evidence and witnesses. The charge is that the stage company is charging discriminatory rates in fares between towns on the San Jose-Oakland run.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny told Chief McNamara, who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the uninjured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lanny's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

CHAPTER VI.—From the San Jose banker McNamara learned that the girl he knew as Nance Belden was Penelope Gatlin, heiress to $750,000. The banker did not know Penelope's whereabouts. Mrs. Gatlin was now the wife of a man named Merton. McNamara ordered Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angelloti to "lay off" Lanny, whom they suspected of harboring Nance.

CHAPTER VII.—When Lanny got home one evening she found Nance sound asleep, curled up on her guest-room bed. Several days later the hardboiled exterior of Nance Belden suddenly vanished and the girl became the refined Penelope Gatlin. Her partially restored memory led her to tell Lanny of her wealthy father, Theodore Gatlin, and of her girlhood in France.

"There is a reason for that." Doctor Burt's scientific mind was already racing along this new trail. "Penelope has had a wretched childhood; she knew nothing but unhappiness up to the time she received the shock that threw her mental gears out of mesh. She hated her mother with a terrible hatred. Feared her, probably. Then she made up her mind to forget her mother. And the will to forget was so strong that she succeeded.

"Not only did she forget her mother but her entire past life as well. Well, she ran away, and she'll never find her way back until she acquires sufficient courage to face the old issues again, surmount them and defeat them."

"But is that possible?" McNamara asked.

"Quite. She will have to have assistance and the sort of treatment I think I can give her, and she must have assurance that never again will she be subjected to the old unhappiness. By the way, I wonder if Penelope was a love child. Have you looked up her parentage, Dan?"

"I haven't. Can't you ask Mrs. Merton about the girl?"

"I suppose I could. But if lunacy ran in the family of her father or mother, I'm not going to bother with Penelope."

"If you decide to take her on, we'll have to get her back into this city," McNamara mourned, "and Flynn will pick her up."

"We'll fix her nose first," Lanny said.

McNamara beamed upon her. "Her criminal photographs and Bertillon measurements are gone to glory, Lanny. What did Penelope say in her letter?"

"Not a great deal. She said, among other things, that after leaving my house she found two hundred dollars. So she returned it."

"Give me that two hundred, Lanny. Stephen, our little thief is honest."

"As one personality she would remember you gave her two hundred dollars, but as the other she couldn't remember who gave it to her," said Lanny.

"Get over to Paris as quick as you can," McNamara commanded, "or she'll be stealing the Eiffel tower."

"Stephen can't spare me," said Lanny.

"Stephen can spare you," he decided.

"It's got to be," McNamara urged. "Nance fled the town with a letter of credit for ten thousand, but she'll go through that like a weasel through a rat hole. Take a bankroll with you, Lanny, and when you get there take charge of her funds."

"Get Over to Paris as Quick as You Can," McNamara Commanded.

"And have her nose done over while you're there," Stephen urged.

"There's a hitch," said Lanny. "The girl evidently got a passport in New York—"

"Not in New York. In San Francisco," McNamara interrupted.

"Well, will a strange photograph on her passport get her back into the United States?"

"She can go to the American consul in Paris, and present proof that she's the same woman with a different nose," Stephen said.

"She'll do nothing of the sort," McNamara was very emphatic. "When her trail is lost it will be lost forever. Lanny, when you have that new nose built for the girl, have half a dozen new passport photographs of her taken, and send them and her passport to me. The seal of the United States of America is on the passport and covers a part of the photograph. I know a man that'll make me a seal that would fool the American eagle himself. We'll fit it down over the old seal and stamp the new photograph. Then I'll send it back to you—and may God have mercy on my soul, for you can blackmail me for that the longest day I live," Dan cried.

This was too much, Lanny put her arms around him and kissed him on each cheek.

"And that's a seal that'll get by, too." Dan was embarrassed. Lanny was, too—so she took a hasty departure.

The two men stared after her, admiration in their eyes. "A d—d fine woman, that. None finer," said McNamara.

"Why don't you marry her?" The suggestion popped out of Doctor Burt as suddenly as it had occurred to him.

"Now, there's an idea," McNamara mumbled dazedly. "How long have you been mulling it over?"

"Subconsciously, since you entered the office. I caught a gleam in Lanny's eyes—and when she kissed you, the subconscious crystalized into the conscious."

"I'll think it over."

"You'll not think it over, Mac. You'll make up your mind now. And I can get along without her, although the going will be pretty skiddy. But of course she'll marry you if you ask her. Lanny never proffers her friendships or her loves on the half shell. And there's still time, my boy, still time."

"Not if she goes to Paris."

"I've heard of police chiefs securing a leave of absence for six months."

"I couldn't take a six months' honeymoon to Paris, lad. I've saved eight thousand dollars—"

"What? You a chief of police and only worth eight thousand dollars?"

"God help me, boy, I'm honest."

Stephen roared his merriment. "Why, you great jackass, I know that. I wouldn't let every man have Lanny. But don't you worry about money. Lanny is a business woman. She's managed me since I was a boy, and that includes my finances. I'm loaded up with good dividend paying stocks. You know, I could be a mighty good friend to the man who would be good to Lanny."

"I'll consider the proposition," the cautious Celt replied, "although I'd rather be a bachelor than a disappointed lover."

"Tell you what to do, Mac," Stephen advised. "Send her a nice photograph of yourself. If she puts it in a silver frame you may proceed with confidence."

"How will I know, my boy?"

"If it's in a silver frame on the dressing table in her bedroom, it'll be a cinch."

"How'll I get into her bedroom, you blockhead?"

"I'll steal her latchkey and have a duplicate made. Then you can investigate."

McNamara rose and held out his hand. "'Tis a pity, Stephen, my boy, you aren't in my detective bureau. Good night."

The annual parade of the police force was but a week distant, and during that week Dan lived entirely on orange juice and spent his nights in a Turkish bath. As a result he dropped eight pounds off his northern elevation. Very erect and martial he sat on a milk-white charger, while a photographer took several exposures of him and his command.

When the prints were delivered to him, he sent them all to Lanny with a note saying:

"Now that we are both in the same crooked conspiracy, I thought you might be interested in having the latest photograph of the biggest crook of them all."

The following day Stephen Burt sent him a key, and the following afternoon McNamara let himself into Lanny's house and discovered one of the photos on her dressing table—and in a gold frame! Another print in a silver frame appeared in her drawing room.

"Holy Moses!" he soliloquized. "I'm in for it now! God help me, there's no escape!"

CHAPTER IX

UPON his return to his office McNamara found in his mail a photograph of Lanny, indorsed: "To dear old Dan—from his partner in crime—Lanny." While he was gazing upon it and telling himself how little justice the portrait did the beloved subject Stephen telephoned, demanding that he come to the office.

Lanny was in tears. "I've just had another visit from Mrs. Merton, Dan," Stephen began. "It seems that after two years of inactivity, during which time she had elected to believe Penelope Gatlin dead, she has developed a crazy notion to prove it. She wants to get Penelope's fortune."

"You questioned her about her daughter?"

"Yes, but she doesn't know it," said Stephen. "I hypnotized her first and spent an hour questioning her, and it appears that this morning she visited your captain of detectives and asked him to throw out a dragnet to locate Penelope Gatlin. She brought him some snapshots of the girl—told him her real name—all about her money—the girl's habits and peculiarities — everything. When I'd discovered enough to put Lanny in tears, I awakened Mrs. Merton and sent her away happy, but with this command firmly planted in her subconscious mind—she must not think of the name Penelope Gatlin. When I awakened her I asked her if she had an adopted daughter. She replied, surprised, that she had. I then asked her the name of this adopted daughter—and a look of terror came over her face. For the life of her she couldn't think of the name and begged me not to mention it if I knew it."

"It's a pity you didn't think of doing that before she went to the detective bureau with her information," McNamara cried, and called up the Security Trust company.

"The captain of detectives has put Flynn and Angelloti on the case," he announced drearily when he had hung up, "and Flynn has already been to the bank, making inquiries. When he presented his credentials the cashier showed him everything. They'll identify that girl as Nance Belden, trace her to Paris as readily as I did, and the French government will be notified that Penelope is an escaped convict. They will immediately deport her and Flynn will meet her at Hoboken."

"But can't you do anything about it, Dan?" Lanny pleaded.

"Nothing! Flynn and Angelloti are on the trail officially now." He stared at Lanny tragically. "I'm out of the picture now and can do nothing but advise you. Send two cables—one to Nance Belden in Paris and the other to Penelope Gatlin at the same address. Say: 'Come at once—Lanny dying—cable name vessel on which leaving,' and sign it 'Steve.'

"I'll meet her at the dock," Stephen decided. "I'm due in New York next week."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," said Dan. "I'll send that convict in my house." He shuddered and grimaced in his distress. "I could handle the wop with money, but Flynn has sworn an oath! And because I've made a monkey out of him he'll keep it. He'd rather make a monkey out of me now than acquire great riches—and if I'm broke, most likely the captain of detectives will step into my shoes, and Flynn will stand a good chance of becoming captain of detectives. Oh, murderation, Lanny darling, have you a little whisky in the house? I'm faint, so I am."

"You're suffering from heart trouble, you egg," Lanny cried savagely. "Yes! A weak heart, a soft heart, a human heart."

"Send that cable," he roared.

"Yes, get busy, Lanny," Stephen urged. "The bird of time has but a little way to flutter—and the wretched fowl is on the way."

After Dan McNamara had left his office, Doctor Stephen Burt gazed with mild disapproval upon Lanny.

"Unlike you and Dan McNamara," he said, "I dislike having the peaceful tenor of my life disturbed. You and Dan love a fight for its own sweet sake, but I do not. I have a particular aversion to grand jury indictments, and it is a possibility you and your boy friend have let me in for."

"Fiddlesticks!"

"Lanny, I'll be angry with you in a minute. Now, listen to me, and whatever you do, do not talk back. Dan McNamara has run out on us. I mean you. He's through. Dan's rattled. If he hadn't been he'd never have ordered the sending of such a fool cablegram."

"Dan McNamara knows his way about," Lanny defended. "He's more than nine years old."

"So do I, Lanny, it will be highly dangerous to send that cablegram. How is she to know it isn't a message to decoy her back to the penitentiary? If she receives it while she's Penelope Gatlin, she is extremely liable to cable for confirmation before acting on it. That would mean a delay of not less than twenty-four hours. On the other hand, if she is Nance Belden when she receives it, she will leave Paris openly and walk right into the hands of the New York police. I'm not much of a detective, but tonight I'm a better one than that McNamara idiot."

He drew a sheet of paper toward him and commenced writing, while Lanny glowered at him. Presently he sat up and read:

"Grave danger stop beat it some other country traveling by motor stop upon arrival cable address stop if need funds will cable them stop leave Paris establishment going concern stop go out for walk and disappear stop unless these instructions followed you leave trail for persecutors to follow.

"Mac."

Lanny relented. "You might make a detective, at that."

With Dan McNamara definitely out of the fight, Stephen felt lonely and apprehensive. He wondered why the girl had fled to Paris in the face of Dan McNamara's instructions to flee to Lower California, to enter which no passport is required. He asked Lanny.

"Oh, that's no mystery, Stevie. I brought home from the office, intending to show it to Dan, an article by a celebrated plastic surgeon of Paris. Penelope read it with great interest. She went to Paris to consult this French plastic surgeon and also to have samples of her new nose drawn by a competent artist."

Instantly Something Clicked in His Brain and He Knew He Was on the Trail of Nance Belden Again.

When the captain of detectives called in Detective Sergeant P. Flynn and related to him the tale told to him by Mrs. Rudolph Merton, Flynn gave no sign of being particularly interested. Carefully and methodically he arranged in his mind the facts as stated, and when he left the presence of his superior, all he knew was that he was to strive to recover a lost heiress by name Penelope Gatlin, and that she had a nose that should make her recognizable anywhere.

After nine hours of refreshing slumber, Flynn proceeded to ponder the case of Penelope Gatlin of the saddle nose. "I seem to be getting my fill of girls with saddle noses who disappeared mysteriously," he decided lazily—and instantly something clicked in his brain and he knew he was on the trail of Nance Belden again. An heiress, eh? McNamara had hinted at powerful influences back of Nance Belden, and she certainly must have hired the expert help she had had in her escape from San Quentin penitentiary.

"McNamara knows who she is," Flynn decided. "He's getting his—in chunks—for helping her. I'll bet it's the same girl."

Employing identically the same means McNamara had employed, he traced Penelope Gatlin to Paris within three days. But he had now to prove that Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden were one and the same person, so he interviewed the United States marshal, who secured for him one of the girl's passport photographs. Armed with this, Flynn crossed the bay to San Quentin.

"Is that Nance Belden?" he asked the matron.

"That is Nance Belden," was the reply.

Flynn was somewhat irritated. He knew Penelope Gatlin was at 27 Rue St. Honore, Paris, but he did not know that Nance Belden was! Suddenly it occurred to him that he had had an official interview with everybody connected with this mysterious case, except Dr. Stephen Burt.

"You're a long time getting around to see me, Sergeant," Stephen charged, and indicated a large, comfortable armchair.

"I called on you once, Doctor, but you didn't know it. That was the night after Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin. Me an' my partner trailed you to the chief's house."

Flynn, with great deliberation, produced Penelope's photograph.

"Do you know the lady?" he queried.

"I think I do, Sergeant."

"Who is she?"

"Is there any reason why I should express an opinion?"

"Not unless you choose to be good-natured. I suppose you know you're in Dutch for aiding and abetting an escaped convict."

"Well?"

"Naturally we don't want to make the going hard for a man of your standing," Flynn continued.

"Dan McNamara is my friend."

"Well, Mac is out of it. He can't protect you because he must protect himself. It might interest you to know that Nance Belden and a lost heiress, Penelope Gatlin, are the same person, and I have the Paris police watching her right now."

"Are you quite certain the girl is still at that Paris address?" asked Stephen.

"I know it."

"I know she isn't—and the Paris police do not know where she is."

"Do you?"

"No, but if I did I wouldn't tell you."

They looked at each other searchingly, then both laughed. "I see there ain't much use pumpin' you, Doc," Flynn admitted. "Well, a fellow can't be ruled off for trying."

"When were you to see a doctor last?"

"At the age of twenty-two. Why?"

"How old are you?"

"Forty-two."

"Well, just to prove I'm friendly I'll give you a quick physical examination. It may save you a fee later from some other physician. Mind if I give you a quick look-see?"

"Go to it," said Flynn.

Stephen tested Flynn's heart action and lungs and took his blood pressure.

"You're up thirty-six points," he told him.

Flynn was distinctly perturbed. "What does that mean?"

"It means that you have a fairly well developed case of hardening of the arteries. If you were to be reexamined physically, for promotion, you might be retired on pension."

"I couldn't afford that," cried Flynn. "I've got a wife and five children."

"Nevertheless, I would suggest you apply for a six months' leave of absence and have me treat you. How's your eyesight?"

"Grand," P. Flynn mumbled.

"I doubt it, Sergeant. I'll bet you a hundred dollars you cannot look into this little mirror fifteen minutes without averting your gaze. Want to earn the hundred?"

"I can't afford that much of a bet, Doc."

"Well, then, we'll not bet, but if you can I'll give you a hundred dollars."

Stephen produced a hand mirror and held it two feet in front of Flynn and about six inches above the level of his glance. He took out his watch. "Go!" he said. "And remember I'm watching you. If you get through this test successfully there's hope for your arteriosclerosis."

P. Flynn grinned and gazed. In taree minutes the effort oppressed him. Stephen's voice reached him as from a distance.

"You are going to sleep. Sergeant. I'm not," Flynn protested drowsily, just as his eyes closed and his head fell forward on his breast.

Stephen's soft hands stroked the detective's brow. "Why did you call to see me?"

"To get you to identify the photograph," Flynn's voice was faint.

"Why was that necessary?"

Flynn hesitated, struggled a little, but lay back quietly again as Stephen's facile hands resumed their light massaging. "Are you going to oppose me, Sergeant?"

"No, Doctor."

The tones were dead and lifeless, for Flynn slept a hypnotic sleep.

"Why was it necessary that I should identify the photograph?"

"I've got to know before I act, Doctor. The matron at San Quentin says it's Nance Belden, but the photograph is on the passport of Penelope Gatlin."

"That name, Penelope Gatlin, is bad luck," Stephen warned. "Never repeat it to a human soul. If you do it may mean your death. And your oldest child will be kidnaped, tortured and killed."

"Oh, God, no!" Flynn cried out in agony.

"You must forget Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden. Will you?"

"Yes, Doctor."

"Make up your mind now that you will never mention those two names again as long as you live. You promise?"

"Yes, Doctor."

"Now, what is the name of the girl whose photograph you showed me?"

A curious slight spasm of distaste flashed across Flynn's face. He shuddered. "I don't know," he replied.

"What is the name of the girl who escaped from San Quentin?"

"I don't know."

Stephen struck Flynn a smart slap on the top of the head. "Wake up," he commanded.

Flynn came awake instantly and looked extremely foolish. "Well, you didn't stand the test," Stephen assured him. "You were falling asleep, so I awakened you."

"Am I pretty bad, Doc?"

"You're this bad, that if you do not take treatment you will be in a bad way. I'll give you a prescription. Come and see me again."

"Thank you, Doc. You're mighty kind. Good Lord, Doc, am I going crazy? I don't remember why I called on you."

He picked up his hat, bade Stephen good night and left.

CHAPTER X

WHEN the cablegram sent to Penelope Gatlin had been delivered for at least three days Dan McNamara telephoned Lanny to ask if the girl had answered. Upon being told she had not, he was so cast down that Lanny felt sorry for him. So, like all women who feel sorry for a man, she decided to feed him, and invited him for dinner that night. She said Stephen would be there.

"That's no inducement," McNamara rumbled, "but I'll come anyhow. Thanks."

McNamara's thoughts kept shuttling back to Penelope Gatlin all that busy day. Finally he telephoned Flynn to report to him.

"How about that Merton case I sent up to the chief of detectives recently?" he asked, when Flynn appeared. (McNamara hadn't sent the case up at all, but he knew Flynn did not know this.)

"Did you get a line on the girl?"

"Sure. Traced her to an address in Paris."

"Under what name is she registered with the Paris police?"

"Chief, I can't just recall it."

"It was Penelope Gatlin, wasn't it?"

Flynn flinched a little. I don't know."

"You're as bad as Mrs. Merton. What's the matter with you?"

"I don't know, Chief. I think we might as well drop the case."

"Very well, then, forget it, Pat. I was mildly curious, that's all." He dismissed Flynn. "By Jupiter, that fellow's getting too deep for me!" he soliloquized. And he telephoned the captain of detectives. "What about that case of the lost Merton heiress?" he demanded.

"We've dropped it on Flynn's advice."

MISS LAURA DUTRA IS WED TO L. LUCIO AT RENO RITES

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lucio, wed recently at Reno, Nevada, have returned from their wedding trip to the southern part of the state and established their home at Newark. Mrs. Lucio is the former Miss Laura Dutra.

The couple took their numerous friends in this district by complete surprise on Sunday, September 8, when they slipped away to Reno, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. George Olson, of San Fransisno, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Garcia. The latter couple were best man and matron of honor at the ceremony, which took place in the Reno Catholic church. The couple drove directly to southern California following the rites. From there they visited old Mexico, after a stay in San Diego.

Mrs. Lucio, daughter of Mrs. Marianna Dutra, of Newark, is a secretary at the Pacific Gas & Electric Company office at Niles, a position she has held for a number of years. She is a graduate of the Washington Union High school.

Lucio, son of Antone Lucio, of Centerville, has been a representative of the Union Oil Company at the district plant in Centerville since he completed his education at local schools and St. Mary's College. He was an outstanding student at the Washington Union High school, having been honored for excellence in his work. In addition, he was active in athletics.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lucio are identified with social and fraternal activities in this district. Lucio was recently installed as first vice president of the Washington parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West.

SPEEDERS TO FACE JUDGE ON MANY CHARGES

Judge J. A. Silva plans on a busy day at the Niles court house tomorrow, with more than twenty-five speeders slated to appear on numerous counts. The charges range from the minor infraction of "headlight out" to reckless driving. Last Friday the judge disciplined seven highway miscreants.

The judge attributes the rush of violators during the past few weeks to increased summer traffic, bound for celebrations and fiestas in various parts of the state.

H. L. Scott, founder of the league, and head of the chamber committee in connection with it, will also address the assemblage. He has prepared a statement of the financial status of the team, which he read before the chamber Monday. With $34 on hand at the start of the season, the Niles nine collected a total of $149, $90 of which was spent for equipment, etc., as the games progressed. HUSKERS POINT FOR HOLLISTER GAME TOMORROW

Jess Regli's Huskers will have opportunity to redeem themselves tomorrow afternoon at Hollister, when they meet the gridders from the Hollister high school in the second game of the season.

Faced by a heavier and more experienced eleven last Thursday, the Centerville aggregation suffered a six to nothing defeat at the hands of the Pittsburg team. Regli's charges, still growing early-season sprouts, did themselves proud, however, in holding the heavier crew to one touchdown.

Several points were cleared up concerning the local team, however. Al Muniz, fleet half, looks better than ever, and barring injury, should have his best season. Jorgensen at center, Cesari at guard, and Silva and Juarez at ends, will fill the bill with a little more work. The backfield is fast, very fast, and shows promise of effective action. Frank Mederios, hard-hitting full, is deadly accurate with his passes, for so early in the year.

Inquest Slated This Week In Train Death

Funeral services were held Saturday for William C. Baldwin, itinerant, killed in a fall from a train near Decoto last Wednesday. Interment was in the Holy Ghost cemetery.

After investigation, the Botelho Chapel of Palms discovered that Baldwin is the son of Mrs. Mary M. Baldwin, of Sumerville, Massachusetts. Word of his death has been sent to her.

An inquest will be held late this week, according to Deputy Coroner F. F. Botelho.

DISTRICT SCOUTS LAY PLANS FOR BIG RALLY

Centerville Boy Scouts are taking the initiative in preparations for the first district scout rally, to be held at the Washington Union High school gymnasium late in October.

Harold Benner, assistant commissioner, has named Robert Salz, George Mathiesen and Fred Rogers as a committee to work out details for the event. The Centerville troop will be hosts to other township units. There will be scout demonstrations, merit badge displays, knot-tying and other attractions.

The rally, to be the first for the 1935-'36 season, will mark a new era in scouting here, Benner says. He points out that the boys are planning the evening themselves, with a minimum of assistance form officials. Philip Souza and Ed. Morgensen, scoutmaster and assistant, are overseeing the plans.

Townshipwide Organization Plans Stir Reminiscences

Although indications do not point to a repetition of the failure, old-timers here discuss the Alverado Chamber's effort to form a township-wide civic organization in terms of previous experiences, calling attention to a similar organization in existance before the World War.

At that time, it is said, chambers of commerce in the several towns decided to work for the common good, and formed an association of south county civic groups. All progressed harmoniously until a certain road question arose. It was planned to build a road directly to Irvington, from what is now Overacker, but loud protests from Mission San Jose, backed, it seems by the organization, prevented the construction. Irvington was very much put out over the outcome, and withdrew.

Other questions, concerning location of industries, widened rifts in the union, as each town, forgetting the "common good" clause, scrambled for benefits.

It is pointed out, however, that Alvarado chamber's suggestion comes at a time when new organizations, with years of service ahead of them, are getting under way, all intent on bettering the district. The opinion seems to be in favor of the Alvarado plan, at least for a good, honest trial.

After inspection of the several units of the institution, a picnic luncheon was enjoyed in the banquet room. At 7 p. m. the ladies staged an entertainment in the assembly room for the women of the home family, while the officers of the lodge put on the third degree in Masonry at the temple under the direction of Worshipful Master Earl L. Howatt. S. L. Hancock presided at the first section, James C. Holland at the second and Howatt, the third. Herman Miller was the organist.

A feature of the ceremonies was the participation of the Fruitvale Masonic male chorus, directed by Harry Powell. Announcement was made by Howatt that the lodge will resume its annual visits to the home, after a three-year interlude.

within the next few weeks. The lines will be painted on the southerly side of the street, from H street to a point easterly from J street. Parking lines from G to H street had been first painted by the Senior Chamber of Commerce, under state permit, in 1932.

The session was started with a treasury report by Treasurer Will Cavanaugh, after which committees reported on work accomplished during the past few weeks. James Delury, street department chairman, told of his inability to tend to the department's tasks last week-end due to a sprained wrist.

Plans were presented and approved for a turkey whist party, to be held in November.

President Kerns told the group that future meetings will feature entertainment or speakers.

Lewis Lewis, acting secretary for the evening, and chairman of the hall committee, announced that the next meeting will be held at the Florence restaurant on the evening of October 7.

WILL IRON
1 shirt, 2 nighties

Is your electric bill higher than it used to be?

And do you still think of it as "a light bill"?

That's what it was once. Now lights are only a part of it. Now it includes a few cents for the

RADIO
TOASTER
VACUUM SWEEPER
HAND IRON
WASHING MACHINE

Maybe it includes an electric refrigerator. Then you have no bill for ice.

Or a range — and you have no bill for other fuel.

Electricity is Your Home's Biggest Bargain.

SAD iron days became glad iron days when the sleek and shiny electric iron came into women's hands. Perhaps in your home it was the first electric servant you put to use. Right then your electric bill became more than a light bill.

Now for just a few pennies a day, about the price of a package of cigarettes, or a magazine or a piece of pie, electricity gives your home many services besides lighting. It "perks" coffee, makes ice, beats batter, crisps toast, curls hair, sweeps rugs, runs electric clocks and radios . . . well, you can probably add more to this list.

Really, now, isn't electricity making life a lot easier in your home since the day you first used an electric iron? What else gives you such full value for your money?

RAGING GRASS FIRE PERILS BUILDINGS NEAR CREEK BED

After a dry season remarkably free from fires, Niles received the worst scare of the summer Monday afternoon, when a raging grass blaze, thought to have been started by urchins, raced up the creek channel southwest of the town.

Niles' Firemen, called into action by the siren at about 4 o'clock, arrived barely in time to save the old P. C. Hansen lumber shed, at the foot of G street. The structure was already blazing at the windward corner.

Fanned by a brisk westerly breeze, the flames raced up the channel through dense growths of thistles and grass, threatening the Hunter poultry farm buildings and homes at the foot of I street. Firemen, children and neighborss fought the flames with wet sacks. No damage was reported.

Lawrence Bunting, gravel pit superintendent, stated that the blaze was beneficial in one respect, in that it eliminated the hazard of a fire when the town would be less able to cope with it. He pointed out that the danger had been abated earlier in the season when grass at the gravel company fence lines had been oiled and burned off. This firebreak proved its value Monday.

Fire Chief Tony Alves and Assistant Chief Clarence Crane exploded the theory that the fire had started in Pat Murphy's garbage dump, when they hinted a number of small boys, whose names are withheld, were seen shortly before the alarm was turned in. The youthful firebugs will be kept under strict watch.

NILES IS INTERESTING PLACE, POSTAL HEADS FIND

Twenty-seven members of the Alameda County Postmasters' Association gathered at the Florence restaurant last Thursday night as guests of Postmaster Howard V. Fournier, of Niles, for their regular monthly session.

Following the dinner, at which there were a number of short talks, Fournier took the group on a tour of inspection, pointing out interesting features of the town. The Niles post office, considered one of the best in the nation for its size, was a center of interest.

Mrs. Nellie Donohoe, postmaster at Oakland, expressed the opinion of the assemblage, when she said she had never realized what an interesting place Niles was.

The next meet will be held on October 20 at Irvington, with Postmistress Mildred Blacow as hostess.

F. V. Jones, chairman of the flag committee, told the members that the time had come for a flag replacement after ten years. He will render a full report next week, including funds remaining and estimated cost of a new flag.

H. V. Fournier, present at the meeting, told of the meeting of the postmasters' association here last Thursday night. He stated that the group was pleased with the city. Many of them had never stopped here before.

The most important discussion of the day concerned the presentation of the Southern Alameda County Baseball League trophy to the Niles team, to take place at ceremonies at the Florence restaurant next Monday night.
